VSGA-VIP SCHOLARSHIP FOUNDATION TO DISTRIBUTE $238,500 TO 49 AWARD RECIPIENTS

RICHMOND — Forty-five high-school seniors and four graduate students in the turfgrass research program at Virginia Tech are among 49 scholars who will be honored on Monday, June 1 at Richmond Country Club as the VSGA-VIP Scholarship Foundation introduces its 2026 award recipients.

The Foundation provides grants and gifts for scholarships, scientific and educational research, and other charitable purposes. This year's grants total $238,500 and since being launched, the program has distributed nearly $3.5 million to 1,301 students.

Included in the 2026 total are three $10,000 awards, matching the largest gifts the Foundation has ever rewarded.

"The VSGA-VIP Scholarship Foundation was honored to announce the creation of and to award three new, named scholarships—the Linda A DiVall award, the Jake Allison Award and the Ned Baber Award," VSGA-VIP Scholarship Foundation President Joan Gardner said. "The generosity of these donors, combined with that of our VSGA-VIP cardholders, our previously established named awards, and other individual donors, allowed the Foundation to enhance our encouragement and support of Virginia's scholar golfers through an increase in the number of awards granted, and in the total dollar amount of scholarships."

Funding for scholarships is generated primarily from the sale of the VSGA VIP Golf Card, and Virginia high school seniors with an interest in golf are eligible to apply. Students are evaluated based on academic achievement, character, community involvement and an essay on the impact of golf on the applicant's life.

2026 grants include the 25th C. Dan Keffer Award, which goes to an individual in honor of the former VSGA-VIP Scholarship Foundation Committee Chairman. This year's recipient was Charlottesville's Liam Foster, who attends Stanford Online High School.

Other 2026 grants include the Spencer-Wilkinson award, which draws from a fund formed by Debbie Spencer and Mary Nell Wilkinson. Since its formation more than 20 years ago, 60 young women have received Spencer-Wilkinson scholarships. This year's award went to McLean's Kaitlyn Lee, who attends The Potomac School.

The Linda A. DiVall Award is a new named scholarship for 2026. The first recipient is Chesapeake's Alexis Goboy, who attends Catholic High School. Three more named scholarships were introduced for 2026 as well. The Jake Allison Award went to Blacksburg's Cameron Sharp, who attends Blacksburg High School. The Ned Baber Award went to Roanoke's Zuhair Mirza, who attends North Cross School. The Benny Wang Trust Award went to McLean's Kevin Ren, who attends McLean High School.

The Red Speigle Award, named in honor of the late longtime teaching professional from the Peninsula area, was given to Virginia Beach's Jordyn Kyle, who attends Atlantic Shores Christian School. The David A. King Award, which the senior amateur golfer established in 2002, went to Henry Hung of Vienna, who attends Oakton High School. The Richard Smith Award, given in remembrance of the VSGA's longtime director of championships and supporter of junior golf, went to Charles Lange of Richmond, who attends St. Christopher's School. The Mike Wise Award, introduced in 2023 and named in honor of the late Roanoke Valley philanthropist with ties to the First Tee – Roanoke Valley, went to Nicholas Messenger of Callaway, who attends Franklin County High School.

For the first time, two VSGA Military Scholarship awards were allocated. Recipients in 2026 were Quantico's Madison Bartra, who attends Quantico Middle/High School; and Chesapeake's Austin Stephens, who attends Grassfield High School. The Military Scholarship was first presented in 2024 and is intended for students who are dependents of active-duty or retired members of the military.

TURFGRASS RESEARCH AWARDS

Samuel Crawford

- His research project focuses on the development and application of advanced artificial intelligence (AI) and robotics in the field of turf management, specifically for high-value turf areas like golf greens. The key innovation here is the use of robotic systems equipped with optical weed-recognition capabilities to identify and eradicate weeds through precise, organic methods. These methods include the use of cryogenic liquids and laser technology, which are targeted specifically at weeds, thereby minimizing environmental impact and avoiding damage to the turf.

Aman Jakhar

- Research has involved spring dead spot and winter injury, focused mainly on how these conditions affect athletic field playability and safety. Her findings show some of the measurements we take such as surface hardness (clegg hammer), ball rebound (measuring height of ball bounce), soil moisture, and shear strength (shear vane) can be used for golf course maintenance and ensuring golfers are provided with the most consistent playing surface possible.

Elisabeth Kitchin

- Her research focuses on identifying the exact precision and efficacy of targeted applications of pesticides for turfgrass pests, particularly diseases and weeds commonly found on golf courses. While maintaining a pristine turfgrass stand is paramount within the realm of golf course management, the integration of precision technology holds immense potential. However, the current standards of practice often present challenges in fully realizing the benefits of targeted applications made with GPS sprayer technology. The turfgrass industry has been witnessing a shift towards integrated technology, and the focus is on addressing the specific hurdles faced by golf course managers and turfgrass professionals in implementing these precision turfgrass management strategies.

Samuel Kreinberg

- His dissertation research focused on developing best management practices to help mitigate the risk of pollinator exposure to harmful pesticides through weed management approaches. The work seeks to understand the response of floral physiology and pollinator foraging behavior to various turf protection products in managed turf systems and beyond. With the high use rate of insecticides in turfgrass pest management, it is essential to investigate integrated pest and pollinator management approaches that turfgrass managers can adopt to minimize the decline in pollinator abundance.
